Players Attempt to Escape From Castle Bay in Third World Games' New Horror Card Game, The Testimony of Jacob Hollow

Westminster, CA – March 24, 2003 – Third World Games, Inc., has announced that their new traditional card game, The Testimony of Jacob Hollow will be available to retailers in April 2003. Exclusively shown during the past week at the GAMA Trade Show to retailers and distributors, this new card game features 120 illustrated color and black and white cards showcasing the locations, evils and characters within Castle Bay.

Designed by Origins Award nominated designers, Frank Bustamante and Michael Nickoloff, The Testimony of Jacob Hollow allows two to six players to move to different locations within the town while avoiding evil spirits, abominations and fiends that attempt to reduce a players' life or mind levels to zero. Players can then investigate the town for clues on the current horrors and how to escape alive; they can also play encounters and clue cards on their fellow players to lure the monsters to a player's doom.

Designer Frank Bustamante comments, "We've listened to both retailers and customers when designing this game. The Testimony of Jacob Hollow is non-collectable, easy to learn, self-contained, and quick to play."

The Testimony of Jacob Hollow has a product code of 3WG0300 and ISBN of 0-9728256-0-3. The box contains 120 cards, a two-page rule sheet, and twelve dice. The MSRP of the game is $19.95. Retailers should contact their preferred hobby game distributor to order The Testimony of Jacob Hollow.
